

A Guide to Archives and Manuscript Collections related to Camp Fire USA

Compiled August 15, 2010

David L. Peavy

The following is guide to archives – along with a description of the scope and content of the collection – which contain material related to Camp Fire USA. Because of the amount of primary documents related to Camp Fire USA in collections around the country, this listing is not to be regarded as complete, however, the most important and significant collections are included and marked (*). It is hoped that subsequent revisions to this Guide will enable it to be more comprehensive.

Additions to this guide will be made upon receipt of additional information. If you're aware of a collection not listed, please send the following information to david.peavy@paxtu.org: Creator of collection, title of collection, name of the repository, location of the repository, a brief description of the scope and content of the collection, and, if available, a URL of the collection/finding aid.

Gulick, Luther Halsey. Collection. Archives and Special Collections, Babson Library, Springfield College. Springfield, MA. Contents: This collection documents the work of Luther Halsey Gulick (1865-1918) who was a pioneer and national leader in health and physical education in the late nineteenth and early twentieth century. From 1887 to 1900 Gulick helped establish and supervise the Physical Department at the International YMCA Training School (now Springfield College). Gulick moved to New York City in 1900, where he worked at the Pratt Institute High School and Russell Sage Foundation. Gulick and his wife Charlotte later founded the Camp Fire Girls. There are reports, correspondence, and essays related to the Camp Fire Girls within the collection. Much of the material in the collection covers Gulick's professional career in New York City, especially the 1900-1912 period. There are four scrapbooks of newspaper clippings and other materials by and about Gulick dating from those years. Additionally, there is a scrapbook about Dio Lewis, a fellow physical educator, that Gulick created, and there are two bound volumes of outgoing correspondence from the Triangle Publishing Company, which Gulick helped establish at Springfield College in the early 1890s. A large portion of the collection comprises lectures and articles, both published and unpublished, that Gulick wrote between 1897 and 1912. These writings concern a broad spectrum of topics, including physical education, play, hygiene and health, gender roles, camping, folk dancing, and amateur athletics. Also included are correspondence—both incoming and outgoing—as well as minutes, notes, and other records of several of the national organizations in which Gulick was a leader, including the American Academy of Physical Education, the Athletic League of YMCAs of North America, and the Amateur Athletic Union. A finding aid is available at:

Other Winter & Pond collections include: PCA 87, PCA 21, PCA 316./ In the Alaska State Library, Historical Collections, PO Box 110571, Juneau AK 99811-0571./ Bio/History: Lloyd Valentine Winter (1866-1945) and Edwin Percy Pond (1872-1943), of the firm Winter & Pond Co., were prominent Alaskan photographers. In 1893, Winter came to Juneau from San Francisco and entered a partnership with George M. Landerkin, known as Landerkin and Winter. In 1894, his long time friend E.P. Pond bought out Landerkin. Winter and Pond served as official Alaska photographers for the Alaska-Yukon Pacific Exposition in Seattle in 1909. During the gold rush, Winter was appointed the official photographer for the firm of Underwood and Underwood and also for "Leslie's Weekly" covering gold rush activities on the Dyea and White Pass trails to the Klondike. Winter and Pond operated their Juneau-based curio shop and photography studio for over 50 years until Pond's death at age 71 in 1943. In 1945, Lloyd Winter turned the business over to Francis Harrison, who maintained the Winter & Pond Co. until 1956. <http://vilda.alaska.edu/cdm4/results.php?CISOOP1=all&CISOBOX1=p117+pond&CISOFIELD1=CISOSEARCHALL&CISOROOT=all>
